

Social Media Policy

William Hulme's Grammar School
The best in everyone™
Part of United Learning

Introduction

The internet provides a range of social media tools that allow users to interact with one another. This includes:

- Rediscovering friends on social networking sites such as Facebook.
- Keeping in touch with and following people on Twitter.
- Maintaining pages on internet encyclopaedias such as Wikipedia.
- Use of instant messaging/picture services, eg Instagram or Snapchat.

While recognising the benefits of these media as new opportunities for communication, this policy sets out the principles that United Learning staff and contractors are expected to follow when using social media.

It is crucial that students, parents and the public at large have confidence in the school's decisions and services. The principles set out in this policy statement are designed to ensure that staff members use social media responsibly so that the confidentiality of pupils and staff and the reputation of the school and United Learning are safeguarded.

This policy statement also aims to help staff use social media with minimal professional risk. Staff members must be conscious at all times of the need to keep their personal and professional lives separate.

Key Personnel

The Designated Person for Safeguarding, Mr Ben Howarth is responsible for creating and reviewing this policy. It will be implemented in conjunction with the school's E-learning and IT teams and the Vice Principal (PDBA).

Scope

This policy covers personal and professional use of social media as well as the use of social media for official United Learning/school purposes, including sites hosted and maintained on behalf of either.

This policy applies to personal web presences such as social networking sites (eg. Facebook) blogs/vlogs and microblogs (such as Twitter), chatrooms, forums, podcasts, open access online encyclopaedias (such as Wikipedia), social bookmarking sites (such as del.icio.us) and content sharing sites (such as flickr and YouTube). The internet is a fast-moving technology and it is impossible to cover all circumstances or emerging media - the principles set out in this policy must be followed irrespective of the medium.

Legal Framework

United Learning is committed to ensuring that all staff members provide confidential services that meet the highest standards. All individuals working on behalf of United Learning are bound by a legal duty of confidence and other laws to protect the confidential information they have access to during the course of their work. Disclosure of confidential information on social media is likely to be a breach of a number of laws and professional codes of conduct, including:

- the Human Rights Act 1998.
- Common law duty of confidentiality, and
- the Data Protection Act 2018 incorporating the European GDPR.

Staff should also be aware of the guidance and sanctions contained within the United Learning Disciplinary Policy.

Confidential information includes, but is not limited to:

- Personal information which may identify an individual either at or working for the school, including sensitive personal data. This includes names, ages, images, other personal data kept by the school and the association of that person with the school.
- Information divulged in the expectation of confidentiality.
- School or United Learning business or corporate records containing organisationally or publicly sensitive information.
- Any commercially sensitive information such as information relating to commercial proposals or current negotiations, and
- Politically sensitive information.

Staff members should also be aware that other laws relating to libel, defamation, harassment and copyright may apply to information posted on social media, including:

- Libel Act 1843.
- Defamation Acts 1952 and 1996.
- Protection from Harassment Act 1997.
- Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994.
- Malicious Communications Act 1998.
- Communications Act 2003, and
- Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

Schools and United Learning could be held vicariously responsible for acts of their employees in the course of their employment. For example, staff members who harass co-workers online or who engage in cyberbullying or discrimination on the grounds of race, sex or disability or who defame a third party while at work may render the school and United Learning liable to the injured party.

Professional and School Use of Social Media

Many schools maintain presences on various social media sites as they provide very effective additional channels of communication with parents/ carers, students and the wider community.

For example, Twitter and Instagram are used to collate and publicise a stream of positive messages about the multitude of activities that go on at WHGS and other United Learning schools every day. Some staff have chosen to play a part in this use of social media for professional purposes, often to highlight successes and to encourage participation in their area of work.

This is not without risk, however, and staff members should be aware that:

- services such as Twitter and Instagram are in the public domain and are regularly used by journalists, students, parents and employers.
- submissions can take on a life of their own once sent by users, who should not rely on being able to delete them.
- Schools and United Learning may re-tweet the submissions of staff members to their wider following.
- Students or parents may retweet comments and pictures which directly relate to them, their family or their friends.

Example

A picture of a girl with an outstanding piece of work is tweeted by the school – it does not name her – but is retweeted by the parent and mentions (@’s) his daughter. A predator would now have a picture, name and social media presence of parent and daughter. This may be enough to allow them to start grooming the individual.

- The ability to post anonymous comments to social media platforms, such as Twitter, may result in offensive or upsetting comments being directed at schools or staff.

Personal Use of Social Media

It is reasonable for members of staff to maintain personal web presences in their lives beyond their school life. It is estimated that Facebook is used more than once a day by around 44 percent of the UK online population.

School staff, however, occupy an almost unique professional position due to their work with children and the moral credibility they must maintain. There have been several recent cases where school staff have suffered serious professional consequences as a result of poor judgement in the use of social media.

It is worth considering that information (text, images, video) held in web presences:

- is never completely private and can very easily enter the public domain.
- can be misinterpreted by audiences it was not originally intended for.
- may persist beyond your wishes.
- might be copied and used by third parties without your consent.

It is therefore vital that use of social media in staff’s lives beyond the school be totally separated from their professional identity. However, staff should be aware that even if this separation is strictly adhered to, it remains relatively easy for people (students, journalists, future employers etc) to connect staff in schools with ‘private’ social media presences.

General Social Media Use

- Expectations regarding safe and responsible use of social media will apply to all members of the William Hulme’s Grammar School community and exist in order to safeguard both the school and the wider community, on and offline. Frequently Asked Questions

Why must staff members not upload video content to hosting services (such as YouTube) without sign off from the Director of ICT / Principal / appropriate delegated leader?

This is for reasons of safeguarding and for maintaining the reputation of the school and United Learning. Likewise, staff members must not make use of any social media service with students apart from the school's Learning Platform or The Hub, unless a pedagogical business case and associated risk assessment is agreed.

How can staff members maintain a professional persona through any use of social media for work purposes?

User names should be formal (eg @MrSmith_SchoolName) or anonymised (eg @PE_SchoolName). The latter option also distances the user from their real-life identity and makes online bullying less likely.

Why is it important not to use ambiguity or sarcasm?

All professional submissions to social media sites must show the school and/or United Learning in a positive light and should be written without ambiguity or any rhetorical device (such as sarcasm) which might be misinterpreted. It is surprisingly easy for even the gentlest of humour to be read differently than intended when parsed through abbreviated media such as Twitter.

Why must staff members not enter into dialogue using social media such as Twitter, which schools and United Learning are using purely as a one-way channel for distributing news?

Any attempt by other users to interact with staff members via such services should be reported to the Director of ICT/ Principal / appropriate delegated leader for advice and resolution. The simplest option is usually to take such issues offline. Even the simple act of responding to a pupil's tweeted question confirms that pupil attends the school, links to their wider digital identity and photographs of them and does so in a purposefully public forum.

In asking questions of a teacher through Twitter the student identifies themselves as a pupil of that particular school, and exposes their social media postings to the scrutiny of the wider community and possible bullying or exploitation. Students are encouraged to have private accounts but in order to receive a response from the teacher their account would need to be public.

How to ensure you exercise professional judgement when using social media?

If new to social media it is good practice to ask a senior colleague's opinion before posting an update to a social media service. If in doubt over the appropriateness of a submission, the best option is not to make it. Appropriate disciplinary action will be taken should a member of staff make a submission which brings the school or United Learning into disrepute.

Any images submitted to a social media site should be chosen carefully and should show the school positively. Look carefully at the work being shown:

- does it show good marking?
- are there spelling errors?
- are displays well laid out?

When showing images of adults and children; are they dressed in line with the school uniform policy, behaving appropriately?

Why must caution be used when uploading Images of students or staff?

Sometimes, close up images can identify the student and should be checked carefully. Likewise, no image which might reasonably be judged to cause embarrassment to the student should be published. ‘Over the shoulder’ images (where individuals are not recognisable) or group shots of 3 or more students are safest. Staff should seek advice from a senior colleague before publishing images of students wearing PE kit.

Images of individual staff should only be uploaded with their consent and no image which might reasonably be judged to cause embarrassment to the member of staff should be published.

Individual staff may not want their digital image appearing online possibly because they have been subject of harassment in the past or are keen for ex-partners not to be able to find them. Although the image itself may not identify them additional information either on the school website or how the image was subsequently reused may lead to distress.

Individual students should not be identifiable through submissions to social media sites, for safeguarding reasons. For example, “Excellent piece of Level 7 work shown here by Tom in Y8” is acceptable, whereas including Tom’s surname is not. Any submission that includes an image of a student must not make reference to the student’s first, sur- or full name under any circumstances.

However how other people retweet and reuse the image may lead to safeguarding issues as other followers mention the individual in the picture.

How can I make sure I use a strong password security and prevent the social media account from being hi-jacked and misused?

Passwords should never be written down. A combination of upper and lower case characters should be combined with numerals. Passwords should be changed regularly and in line with school policy. The potential for hi-jacked accounts to bring schools and United Learning into disrepute is significant and responsibility for account security lies with the staff member who controls it. Staff should be cognisant that such accounts are likely to be targeted by pupils for precisely this purpose.

Why is it important that devices used to post content to social media platforms should be password protected?

Fraping (or Facebook raping) is where a third party changes a person’s status or posts inappropriate content to a social media platform without their consent or knowledge. The consequences can be long term and damaging.

A member of staff leaves their iPad in the classroom and it is picked up by a student. Seeing he can access the staff member’s twitter feed he proceeds to post racist comments. He is also able to change the password and email account associated with the twitter feed. He does not take the iPad. It takes 2 days for the member of staff to get the account deleted, during which time more comments have been added and seen by a significant number of parents, pupils and other professionals.

While out for an evening a friend picks up your phone and writes some “witty tweets” while you are at the bar. They do not reflect you as a member of staff and make people question your professional judgement. The same is possible on email and other communication platforms.

Why are we advised not to identify our employer on personal social media platforms?

This is to prevent information on these sites from being linked with the school/ United Learning and to safeguard the privacy of staff members, particularly those involved in providing sensitive frontline services. Do not name the school/ United Learning in any biographical detail associated with personal accounts or use their logos or any other identifying information (such as location).

By adding school as an employer on Facebook it may be possible for people to search for all employees of the school at a future point, irrespective of your privacy settings.

Why can't I say what I like on my personal social media platform?

Staff members should not put themselves in a position where extreme political, religious or philosophical views expressed via social media conflict with those of a public institution such as a school. Even if separation of professional and private lives has been maintained, recent case history shows that teachers who express such views have found their position at school to be untenable. This information is now easier to find as it is possible to search Facebook for example, by likes, affiliation and places of employment. Likewise, staff members should not use social media to document or distribute evidence of activities in their private lives that may bring the school or United Learning into disrepute.

Why should I not edit open access online encyclopaedias such as Wikipedia in a personal capacity from work?

This is because the source of the edit will be recorded as the employer's IP address and the intervention will, therefore, appear as if it comes from the employer itself.

Social Networking Standards

The statements below set out the standards expected of all United Learning employees when using social networking sites:

Do:

- Act responsibly at all times. Even if you do not identify your profession or place of work, please be aware that your conduct online could jeopardise any professional registration and/or your employment.
- Protect your own privacy. Think through what kinds of information you want to share online and with whom you want to share this information. Adjust your privacy settings accordingly. Remember that the more personal information you share online, the more likely it is that something could have a negative impact on your employment. Think about managing your online friends by restricting what kind of information you give them access to.
- Remember everything is public. Even with the highest level of privacy settings, once something is online it can be copied and re-distributed and it is easy to lose control of the information. Work on the assumption that everything you post online will be permanent and will be shared with others.
- Take appropriate action if you are the target of abuse online. If you find yourself the target of bullying or abuse online then you can take action in dealing with this, such as blocking individuals from interacting with you and using the sites' support mechanisms to report inappropriate activity. The school's on-line safety policy also sets out support mechanisms to deal with cyber bullying issues.

- Be considerate to your colleagues. Pictures or information about colleagues should not be posted on social networking sites unless you have the agreement of the individual concerned. Always remove information about a colleague if they ask you to do so.
- Respect the privacy of others. If photographs are taken at a school or United Learning event, then check whether those in attendance expect that any photos may appear on a public social networking site before posting. Remember it may not always be an appropriate way to share information whether work related or not.
- Update any online sources in a transparent manner. In the course of work, employees may find errors or out of date information displayed through online encyclopaedias. If updating this information, then you must be transparent about who you are and the capacity in which you are doing this. Employees should consult with their line manager before updating or amending any information about the school or United Learning from an on line source.
- Remember the benefits. Used responsibly, social networking sites can be accessed to keep up to date with a number of professions and information. Many use Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn to update and communicate with members. Work blogs may also be useful for communication, networking and professional development purposes but must be discussed and agreed with your relevant Manager/Group Leader.

Do Not:

- Share confidential information online. In line with the GDPR enshrined in the Data Protection Act 2018 employees should not share any child / young person / mother / father / carer identifiable information online or any personal information about colleagues. In addition to this, any confidential information about the school or United Learning should not be revealed online.
- Build or pursue relationships with children, young people, mothers and fathers / carers. Even if the child / young person / mother / father / carer is no longer within your care, United Learning does not deem this as appropriate behaviour. If you receive a request from a child / young person / mother / father / carer then many sites allow you to ignore this request without the individual being informed to avoid any offence. If you are concerned about this in any circumstance, please discuss with your Line Manager.
- Use social networking sites to inform professional practice. There are some circumstances / job roles where this may be appropriate however careful consideration and discussions with management should be applied in line with the information set out in section 5.5 of this policy.
- Discuss work related issues online. This takes into account conversations about child / young person / mother / father / carer / colleagues or anything else which may identify the school or United Learning online and bring them into potential disrepute. Even if you think these conversations have been anonymised they are very likely to be deemed inappropriate.
- Post pictures of children/young people/their mothers/fathers/carers. Never post pictures online even if they have asked you to do this. Employees should never take pictures of a child / young person / mother / father / carer unless they are relevant. If your mobile phone has a camera, then this should not be used in the workplace or on school trips, unless agreement has been granted from the SLT.
- Raise concerns about your work. Social networking sites should never be used for raising or escalating concerns at work. If you have concerns, then these should be raised by either discussing them with your line manager or following United Learning's policy/procedure for raising concerns at work.
- Engage in activities online which may bring the Organisation into disrepute. Think through what activities you take part in whilst online and what you do or say that may bring United Learning or the school into disrepute. Any reports of this will be reviewed in line with their appropriateness.
- Be abusive to or bully other colleagues. Social networking sites should not be used as a forum for abusive behaviour towards colleagues.
- Post derogatory, defamatory or offensive comments about colleagues, the children / young person / mothers / fathers / carers, your work or William Hulme's Grammar School. Everything posted on a social networking site should be deemed as open to the public and it is therefore unacceptable to use this as a forum for posting inappropriate comments.

- All of the above applies to both open and private sections of any social networking site with which employees identify themselves.
